You will find the two courses listed on www.idcec.org. These programs have been well-received throughout the U.S. with course evaluations ranking in the top percentile. Each is an engaging and informative PowerPoint presentation that features clear imagery and commentary, and audience participation. They are ideal for trade center market series, industry showroom events such as “lunch and learn” programs, professional chapter events, and enrichment programs for a broad range of design colleagues.

“Wonderful presenter, knowledgeable, and entertaining”

“Best speaker ever at DCOTA”

“Informative, steady, stimulating, and enjoyable”

“Best color seminar in many, many years”

Connect the Dots: Design Style in Context .2 CEU Credits, #101279

Highlights of design styles from the antiquities to contemporary times are presented within the context of history, culture, events, important people, symbols, and meaning. Examples of modern interpretations guide and inspire designers to incorporate these ideas into new projects.

The Psychology of Color .2 CEU Credits, #101170

Color is powerful. Design decisions related to color are best made with scientific knowledge of the attributes of color. How perception of color directs human response in behavior, psychology, and emotion is explored. Both individual and cultural experience and identification are highlighted. As the meaning of color changes over time and place, future directions are also explored.

Professional organizations require practitioner members to complete continuing education credits in order to maintain their status. IDCEC is the oversight organization that approves and manages the database of CEU programs for interior designers in the US and Canada. Designers who belong to ASID, IIDA, and IDC are among those organizations increasing these requirements. For example, ASID currently requires 6 hours in a 2-year period; effective January 2014 it will be 10 hours.
